Supplementary Fig. 1. A and B: When the patient complained of intermittent flashes of light with blurring of vision in the left visual field, electroencephalogram (EEG) showed rhythmic fast activities originating from the electrode O2 (arrow), followed by spreading to electrode T6 (arrow head). C: When the patient complained of prosopometamorphopsia, EEG showed well-developed and symmetric posterior alpha activity without focal slowing.